educational planners, administrators, researchers, and marketing practitioners involved in all aspects of educational development.

How to Market a University offers leaders and their CMOs the language, examples, and even questions they should discuss and answer in order to build or refine their marketing strategy.

The introduction of educational markets into public and higher education in many countries has led to competitive environments for schools and higher education institutions. This book presents the works of leading scholars and researchers in the field of educational marketing who handle issues of student retention.

Strategic Marketing of Higher Education in Africa explores higher education marketing themes along the lines of understanding higher education markets, university branding and international marketing strategies, digital marketing, and student choice-making. The Higher Education landscape around the world is changing. There is global competition for students' enrolments, universities are competing within their home market as well as in the international market, and as government funding for public universities is reducing there is pressure on universities to seek additional income by increasing their student enrolment. African universities are not an exception in this competitive market. This book is unique in providing a composite overview of strategic marketing and brand communications of higher education institutions in Africa. It recognises that there is a growing need for universities to understand the stakeholders and develop strategies on how best to engage with them effectively. Highlighting the unique characteristics, nature, and challenges of African universities, this book explores the marketisation strategies of African universities, with focus on the strategic digital marketing and brand management. The book provides significant theoretical and marketing practice implications for academics, higher-education administrators, and practitioners on how best to market higher education in Africa and reach out to prospective students. International practitioners aiming to market to Africans and start a partnership with an African university will also find this relevant in understanding the dynamics of the African market.

In this book we aim to evaluate to what extent the strategic marketing planning process is applicable to an educational institution, and secondary to present how this can be achieved by developing a sample strategic marketing plan for a specific MBA. Following an explanatory introduction, a literature review is developed, concerning marketing as a general discipline, the application of marketing techniques to educational institutions, and the strategic marketing plan as a document. With regard to the first aim, the creation of an applicable strategic marketing plan indicates that the development of the strategic marketing planning process is feasible and necessary for educational institutions in order to succeed and to enhance their image in the marketplace. With regard to the second aim, using the strategic framework provided in the literature review, an appropriate model is developed and applied to a generic MBA, showing the benefits a marketing plan can achieve, even in the educational field.

Those interested in and responsible for the fate of these institutions will find in this book a clearly defined set of risk indicators, a methodology for monitoring progress over time, and an evidence-based understanding of where they reside in the landscape of institutional risk.
